Chronology

1999—Madison Presbyterian Church, 128 years old, is torn down to build a Jack-in-the-Box restaurant. This provokes Fletch Coke and the Colonial Dames, Nashville Town Committee, to approach HNI with the idea and first-phase funding for a project to survey and help protect historic Nashville churches.

2000—HNI begins plans for the Sacred Sites Project. Ed Salo, a doctoral candidate at MTSU, is contracted as an intern to prepare the survey forms used for the churches. Later, intern Stephen Guenther is contracted to develop a list of churches to be surveyed and to supervise the Volunteer Surveyor aspect of the project.

Volunteers are solicited through articles in both The Tennessean and HNI's newsletter, Historic Ink. HNI holds training sessions for these volunteers.

2000-2002—Volunteers are given lists of churches to survey. Surveys are conducted and sent back to HNI along with photographs.

2003—HNI closes doors. Sacred Sites Survey Project Files are donated to the Nashville Room.

Biographical/Historical Sketch

The Sacred Sites Survey Project was a project of Historic Nashville, Inc. The Nashville Town Committee of the Colonial Dames, motivated by the demolition of the historic 128-year old Madison Presbyterian Church to make way for a Jack-In-The-Box, provided the idea and the first-phase funding for the project. Negotiations between the two organizations began immediately to plan the future endeavors of the project. The survey was to include all houses of worship in Davidson County over 50 years old, comprising more than 150 locations. An intern, Stephen Guenther, was contracted to compile a list of locations and develop a volunteer surveyor program. Susan Richardson, executive director of HNI, oversaw the project at an administrative level and hired another intern, Ed Salo, to develop the survey form and assist with the project. HNI partnered with the national organization Partners for Sacred Places in order to further understand the task of documenting and preserving historic sacred sites. In fall 2000, the Project began using trained volunteers to complete standard survey forms on churches assigned to them and to photograph these churches using cameras provided by HNI. Information recorded by the volunteers included architectural style, condition, history, architect, and other unique features. The information compiled through the survey was originally intended to be added to an online database on the HNI website. It was also to be used to plan workshops to aid congregations in the maintenance of their historic building(s) and records. In 2003, however, HNI closed its doors and donated the files of this project to the Nashville Public Library.

In 1968, the Historic Sites Federation of Tennessee was formed. The name was changed to Historic Nashville, Inc. in 1974. Historic Nashville, Inc. existed as a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization with a stated purpose to document and preserve the cultural, historical, and architectural heritage of Nashville. This group was instrumental in saving Union Station, the Ryman Auditorium, and many other historic buildings. For many years, they held an annual Market Street Festival to raise awareness of the historic nature of downtown's Second Avenue. In 2003, their records were donated to the Special Collections Division of the Nashville Public Library.

Scope and Contents of the Collection

The bulk of the collection is comprised of the church survey forms and photographs of the churches. The collection also includes administrative papers which provide information about the creation and implementation of the project, including preliminary research.

The survey forms contain architectural descriptions, information on past and present uses for, special features of, overall condition of, and suggestions for maintaining each building. The forms occasionally also show whether church archives, histories, and cemeteries are available for each congregation.

In many cases, photographs and surveys were taken of buildings that once housed a place of worship and have now been converted to business use, but still have preserved the unique qualities of the original building. In other cases, the church building has been destroyed and the survey was conducted on the new building, whether it belongs to the same congregation, a different congregation, or even a new business unaware that the lot once housed a church. A few buildings may have housed a religious-affiliated organization, though not explicitly a house of worship, such as schools, charities, or other similar groups.

The focus of the project is on historic sites in Davidson County, Tenn. whether they are synagogues, churches, former churches, chapels, or meeting houses. These records can be used for studies of not only local religious history, but also business history, urban development, lost architecture, and architectural reuse.

A. Survey Files

Subseries Description: Completed survey forms and photographs of each church taken at the time of the survey. In some cases files may be missing either survey forms or photographs; such instances have been noted in the finding aid. Contains very few photographs dating prior to the time of the survey.

Naming practices within the survey are inconsistent, and three main techniques are used:

- 1) The building surveyed is a structure used by the same congregation for at least fifty years.
- 2) The building surveyed is less than fifty years old, but is used by a congregation which has been in existence for more than fifty years.
- 3) The building is more than fifty years old, was at some point in its lifespan used for religious purposes, but is no longer occupied by a religious organization. In such cases, the building was surveyed and is either listed under the name of the occupant at the time of the survey or under the name of the congregation which it once housed.

Arrangement: The subseries is arranged alphabetically by name of house of worship or occupant's name. Cross references have been included in this finding aid when easily identified in survey materials.

B. Negatives, c.2000-2003, .1 cu.ft.

(shelved separately)

Subseries Description: Photographic 35mm negatives, mostly color but some black and white, for photographs included in the survey files. Most negatives were identified by HNI by photographer's last name. Only some photographers have photo log sheets (see Series I Administrative Files – Subseries C. Intern) which can be used as a finding aid to the negatives. Many rolls of film do not have extant log sheets, including those shot by Robin Kirby (4 rolls), intern Stephen Guenther (18 rolls), and others where the photographer was not identified (14 rolls). It is believed that many of the unidentified rolls may have been shot by Stephen Guenther.

Arrangement: Arranged alphabetically by last name of photographer. Unidentified photographer rolls are filed at the end.
